MOHUN NAMED SHELTON AD

In the short time Barry Mohun has been at Shelton State Community College, the young basketball coach has made a tremendous impact on the school's athletic program. Recently Mohun was named Shelton's new athletic director.

This past year, which was Mohun's third with the college, the Shelton Buccaneers were 28-4, winning the regular season championship and finishing as the runner-up in the Region XXII tournament.

Mohun was named the 2001 Alabama Junior and Community College Conference Division 1 Coach of the year by the AJCCC coaches. The Birmingham Tip-off Club honored him after the season with the Glen Clem Junior College Coach of the Year Award.

Mohun's star player from last season, Rodney Bias, will play for the Alabama Crimson Tide this year. While at Shelton, Bias was first in the nation in rebounding.

But for Shelton's new athletic director, academics are as important as athletics. "We want to provide a positive environment for all student athletes through supervised study halls," Mohun says. "As athletic director, my job will be to work with all the coaches so they have everything they need. One of the things we plan to do is to have an athletic booster club for all sports. I hope we will have athletes who can compete on a national level in all sports."

Right now Mohun has been busy attending summer basketball camps. "I want to look at the seniors and recruits while they are at the camps. I'm excited about the opportunity to help Dr. Rogers in his goal of Shelton becoming one of the top two-year colleges in the nation. I believe athletics can play a part in that," Mohun said.

Mohun received his undergraduate degree from Belhaven College in Jackson, Mississippi and his MA degree from Northeast Louisiana. Before joining Shelton State, he was with Prattville High School in Prattville, Alabama.

Editor's Note

Recently, members of Shelton's Quality Council and SI teams had their pictures made, thanks to Paul Brown. The editor of the Chronicle is attempting to run these pictures. Team 5 appears on the first page of this week's issue. Teams 1, 4, and 2 are shown on this page. Members of the Quality Council will be featured in the next issue. The editor is trying to learn how to scan photographs and greatly appreciates the help of Chuck Boening. She also hopes that everyone will bear with her as she attempts to learn this new technology.
